fronted the boys and tried to look happy but they knew it was feigned smile and knew that the task ahead of them was not an easy one. I briefly explained the rules which were simple enough, anything goes. Sort of kill or be killed. I told them that if they are captured, they could not run away until they are freed by one of their own men and if they are interrogated by General Mandel, they need not reveal any information.

We arrived at Cunningham at 10:00 P.M. and I led the boys right to our Hill. I only had a half hour left to assign each man a job. Feder and Rosenbarten were put in charge of making traps. They trapped the whole area surrounding the hill and also trapped the area between the two bases. Krazy Kahn was put in charge of ballistics since he came with a year's supply of fireworks. He was also told to set off a firecracker if our area was ever to be in danger of being taken by the Murderers. Harlan, Scott, George, and Joseph were sent Kingston & Dew Drop's Follies director has nightmare thinking of AEPI's former victorious skits.

The question is: What is with Kingston House and the name Bernstein? This question was asked all over Queens College by any of 2 or 3 people last year when Kingston-Dew Drop's Follies entry was entitled "Bernstein" (as if you didn't know). Now the truth can be known: Bernstein is God. (or at least god like!)

Follies titles are hard to come by. A listing of Kingston House four straight Follies skits give little insight into the title selection (Note: in case you are interested the previous entries from 1964 are: '64 "The Man From Mother," '65 "The Wizard of 'R's," '66 "A House is not a Dome" '67 "Bernstein"). The title this year will be something totally original. Possibilities that have been mentioned are "Sound of Bernstein" "My Fair Bernstein" and "Little Bernstein's are OK in my Book" (Kudos to Pi). As you can see, the Bernstein syndrome lives on.

All the talk of titles is really secondary, obviously, to Follies itself. Kingston House has been Follies' bridesmaid for two years and we are determined to break the cliché, "Always a bridesmaid, never a Follies winner" (or something like that). Besides, "3" is the charm for us, and "8" is the hex (Eight ball, octopus, octogenerian, etc.) for a certain unnamed Fraternity (Note: if Steve Meltzer reads this - Hil).

It should be said (at this point) that Kingston House stand behind its position of last year's skit that Follies without girls is a drag- perhaps a win, but never the less a drag. Since nobody except that nameless fraternity wants to drag to win, Kingston House once again will enter Follies with the girls of Dew Drop Inn. (or is it enter the girls of Dew Drop Inn into Follies).

The voluptuous, raptuous, palpatating, vibrating, titillating girls of Dew Drop Inn have been with us for three years and have impregnated themselves into our hearts, as we have impregnated ourselves into them (Ah, that is, into their's, or something?).

So the time has come. The Follies Committee has been taken out of mothballs and locked into the hotbox. This will be released on October 23 and they will either have a skit or be dead. Either way you can expect Kingston House and Dew Drop Inn on stage again for our annual December Financial Ruin- namely Follies. See you then or, better still, join us on stage- 100 member casts are hard to come by and your body is needed.
